Gender / Political Participation

I- Introduction:
The National Committee for the Follow up of Women’s Issues pursued its efforts aiming at supporting the participation of women in political domain, alone or in cooperation and coordination with other concerned NGOs. These efforts began during the municipality elections, and the parliamentary elections of 2000 and the municipality elections of 2004. The Embassy of the Kingdom of Holland supported implementation of this project.

II- Objectives:
The NCFUWI, through the well planned activities of this project aimed at:
1- Avail women to equally participate in decision making with men as voting members, and as candidates.
2- Educate and enlighten women on how the election process is conducted, how to vote, who to vote for, clarify the laws that govern the election process, and the meaning of parliamentary representation.
3- Coordinate between women associations and other associations of the civil society to synchronize their work, and enlarge the participation of women in the political domain.

III- Implementation:
The preparation of the educational material and conducting the training workshop were timely accomplished, however the implementation of the remaining activities was delayed due to the assassination of Prime Minister Rafic Hariri, and the political turmoil that followed.

A- Preparation of the Cognitive Material:
a- The NCFUWI, with the help and participation of well experienced members and lawyers, prepared, and printed a booklet containing a summary of eight suggested electoral laws including the quota, from the 94 suggested laws.
b- A Women artist prepared a poster aiming at encouraging women to participate in the change that will be carried out by the members of Parliament, through women's active participation in the parliamentary election.
c- Colored paper clippings each carrying a clear message on women's participation were also printed and distributed. The messages are:
   1- A larger percentage of women in the parliament are a larger capacity for development.
   2- Your right is to participate in the administration of your country, elect your members and run for the elections.
   3- Women’s participation in politics is a chance for change: participate in the elections.
   4- It is not enough to vote: make a good choice and choose the best.
5- A women voting; a women running for elections means better future for the country.

6- Election is a democratic procedure, choose your representatives and make your own list.

d- Few cartoons were prepared by a women participant in the training workshop, and matching slogans were prepared by the working groups who participated in the training workshop.

The cartoons and their matching slogans and comments were printed in black and white and were used and distributed during the regional meetings.

B- Training:
A two day training workshop was conducted at the Commodore Hotel. Around 34 trainers from 15 various organizations and NGO’S were trained as scheduled. Training was conducted in six working sessions over two days under the following titles:

1- Importance of political participation in the parliament and its effect on the process of changes.

2- Role of the Parliament, the duties of the members and election criteria.

3- Laws that regulate women participation in the political life in Lebanon.

4- Samples from suggested electoral laws.

5- Communication skills.

6- Information campaign.

C- Equipment:
The NCFUWI purchased a 4300 W multimedia front USB Prescott ready computer, and Intel 3.2Ghz1MB cash 800Mh2 and HP DeskJet 3740 printer. Purchase was made by choosing the best offer from different quotations.

D- Awareness meetings and information campaign:
Implementation of this stage was delayed till May 2005 due to the political turmoil that followed the assassination of Prime Minister Harriri.

Eleven meetings were organized in the regions in co-operation between NCFUWI and other NGOs and civil society organizations in the respective areas. The regions' coordinators organized these meetings, and the trained members introduced the main topics namely: the importance of women participation in political life; the electoral laws stressing the laws that encourage women participation; and the responsibilities of the members and criteria for selection. The topics generated discussion and interest among the audience of both sexes that ranged from 30 to 200 people and received wide media coverage (photocopies of some paper clippings and a detailed table showing the details of the regional awareness sessions are attached to this report).

The National Committee for Follow up of Women’s Issues organized a press conference titled “Obstacles of running and reasons for withdrawal from elections” at the press syndicate on 30 June 2005 at 12:30 am. The president of the syndicate highlighted the efforts and activities of NCFUWI which deal with social problems in addition to women’s issues.

Dr. Fahima Chrafeeddine highlighted the bad electoral law of 2000, which was formulated especially in favor of selected people and to serve certain political purpose. She questioned the possibility of independent single candidates to run for an election that was made especially to fit and serve artificially organized lists and questioned their capacities to finance their campaigns and compete with the money spent on those “artificial lists” and to pay for, or penetrate the media in the absence of any rules that regulate propaganda and any ceiling for expenditure.

Dr. Aman Chaarani who ran for the elections in Tripoli as a representative for the women organizations, unions and syndicates and the civil society at large presented her experience, she explained that the national atmosphere of March 14, 2005 that called for equal opportunities and the freedom of the state and its institutions, and the support of supported by the Lebanese council of women, the United Women Associations of the North and the National Committee for Follow up of Women’s Issues encouraged her to run for the elections. She realized that slogans are different from reality. She was nominated by, and running in the name of civil society (the 3rd group) that does not exist to the main and major players. She attributed that to the following:

1) The very bad electoral law that results in the success of a group of people who were not selected by the majority of the voters, but by the heads of the lists who control the parliament

2) The corruption of the system that will not allow change and reform which can possibly take place if the new parliament change the existing electoral law?

3) Going back to sectarianism and religious affiliations where by all politicians ask for their shares, but not for the development of the regions and the people whom they are supposed to represent.

4) The political / electoral money and very high budgets, where those who do not have or possess big money are excluded from political activities, this could be also related existing electoral law.

She added that the people, especially women reacted positively with her and expressed their needs for development at all levels.

For all those reasons, and to avoid negative effect of the results of this election on the future plans of women organizations she decided to withdraw

She concluded that we have, to work from now, to create young qualified leaders and support them and encourage them to participate in the political activities of the country. It is important to lobby for a new electoral law, to control legally and administratively political money and regulate expenditure for political activities and to create pressure to include the youth who have completed 18 years of age as well as people living abroad or away from their place of birth to participate in the next election. Furthermore, we have to lobby against sectarianism and religious divisions and to build bridges and ties between the civil society and the state.

Mr. John Jabbour, explained that his withdrawal from the election was due to the (1) bad electoral law, and to the (2) unseen powers that still direct the heads and leaders of the electoral lists and (3) to the chaotic expenditure and media coverage of the election campaigns that could only be provided by the wealthy ruling group.

Mrs. Linda Matar spoke about her previous experience and summarized the reasons for not running by (1) the bad electoral law (2) the bad political system which must change (3) the religious and sectarian system. 4) And the absence of any laws that regulate media coverage and expenditure.

The conference recieved wide media coverage in the daily papers of July 1, 2005.
